SUBJECT: FBLA Creed, What it means to me

Within the business world, these beliefs and skills are necessary to navigate the changing nature of corporations that thrive in our world. The understanding of diversified groups is imperative to making choices that will positively affect my work environment and those around me. A positive and hardworking attitude mixed with a determination to strive to be a team leader and a beneficial facet of a business allows for a role that younger aspiring business leader can look up to. Having these personal qualities of not just the team leader but also the entire team allows for a stronger and more dedicated business that will be able to achieve any goals they set out to reach.

First, I believe it means that everyone deserves to be able to learn, everyone has a right to a full education. Unless you do something that you're not supposed to, then you shouldn't get that right.

Secondly, I think it means to others that all have the chance to learn and should use those abilities to do well in work and in life. That you should be able to act on task to whatever your work gives you.

Feedback:

You did a good job overall. I like your interpretation of the creed. You bring up points that I have not thought of before. The 5 point deduction is for use of contractions in your writing. Remember that contractions should not (shouldn't) be used in business writing. Great job overall though.
