Long Term Project Description

In this unit students will be teamed into groups to develop a business plan for a retail or service business that will be part of a new "mall." Each group will be responsible for all portions of the comprehensive plan that covers everything including setting goals and writing a mission statement, developing the marketing plan, defining operating procedures and researching start-up costs and other financial information. Groups will use a variety of internet resources to develop their plan. When complete, groups should have a plan that can be presented for FBLA competition or even presented to potential investors. The plans should be professionally written and include a variety of graphic elements to make the plans informative, interesting and eye-catching.

Grade(s)

- 10-Tenth
- 11-Eleventh
- 12-Twelfth

Time: This project is a long-term project that can be completed in consecutive class periods or broken up and each section of the project completed as parts of other units. This project can be completed in 25-30 50 minute class periods.

Notes to the Teacher An alternative way to get students to take ownership of this project is to create a model "mall" in the classroom. This can be done using shoe boxes or mailing boxes as each student's store. Students can decorate their boxes, create logos and design floor layouts for their business. Because of the use of Sketch, online 3D rendering program, this step can often be skipped or supplemented with the use of the advanced technology.

BALANCED ASSESSMENT

Constructed Response Combined Methods Informal Checks

Assessment Method/Type:

Peer Assessment Selected Response Self Assessment

Assessment Title: Business Plan rubric & Business Plan Presentation Rubric (included in attachment)

Description/Directions: This project is a long-term project that requires the students to write a professional business plan. The plan has been broken down into smaller chunks so students do not get overwhelmed. Students need to be introduced to a topic via class discussion, lecture, text or sba.gov tutorial and then complete each worksheet portion by hand to create a "draft" of their plan. The teacher must keep the students conscious of the fact that they are writing a comprehensive plan, so students do contradict themselves in different sections of the plan. Students may start assembling the parts of their plan at any time during the project to help maintain consistency. A rubric has been included for both the written plan and a presentation of the plan – this will help both the students and the teacher stay on track and know what is expected. To give the project the importance such a large and comprehensive project requires, students should be given the opportunity to display their final products, either through having the plans bound, participating in a special presentation day of even entering the plans into FBLA competition. Due to the variety of class times and scheduling from school to school, this project has been developed for wide interpretation of duration and scope. The project uses a "mall" that is placed in Lindale, GA - a small hamlet in NW Georgia – please alter this detail to fit the needs of your community.

UNIT PERFORMANCE TASK(S)

Performance Task Title: Business Plan Project Description/Directions: see attached project Rubric for Performance Task: see attached project

SEQUENCE OF INSTRUCTION AND LEARNING

Sequence of Instruction and Learning:

Introduce the project to students discuss the big picture of creating a mall or shopping center and how each business will play a role the success of this new development in the community.

Have the students analyze the community for needs and wants

Begin discussions about the various aspects of the plans and have students complete the worksheets for each of these aspects

Check for continuity – keep the students consistent with their plans as their parts come together to make a whole. This should be done at least at the end of each major rubric section.

Stress the importance of professionalism in their writing

Have students assemble all the parts into a comprehensive, cohesive plan.

Encourage creativity in the presentation of both the written plan and the live and/or multimedia presentation

Make the completion of this project something special

Congratulations! You have decided to start your own business in the newly developed Dragon's Mill Mall located in Southwest Georgia. I am sure your idea for a small business will be met with tremendous support from both consumers and vendors.

Becoming a small business owner is not an easy task. It requires lots of hard work and long hours, however, the freedom of being your own boss and the possibility for unlimited success make all the sacrifices worth it.

An important tool in becoming a successful small business owner is a business plan. Why write a business plan? Here are some reasons:

- To evaluate your business idea and make sure it will provide you the maximum opportunity for success and happiness
- To provide you with written guidelines for success in operating and managing the business
- To communicate your idea to potential financial investors

Your business plan will be used by many different stakeholders in your new business. If you are not using any outside financing, then the plan is for internal use and will help you with important decisions and keep you on track for success. If you need some outside financial assistance to get your operation off the ground, then your plan also serves as a "selling" tool to convince potential investors about the viability of your idea.

Over the next several weeks we will be developing all the necessary aspects of your business plan. We will breakdown all parts into manageable units and finally combine them all into a comprehensive plan. At the end of the course everyone will have a written business plan for their business and develop a presentation of their business to present to the class.

Business Description

Readers of your business plan will first want to know about your business. Highlight some of the reasons why you would like to start this specific business.

Sample Description:

David's Books & More is a new retail business venture due to begin operations on October, 2007. The business is a book and other media store, such as DVDs, music, and video games, intended to serve the community of Rome and the surrounding area. A community of 25,000 residents in North West Georgia, Rome currently only has one national retail outlet dedicated to books and magazines. David's Books & More aims to provide the local citizens of Rome a custom tailored media outlet designed around local needs and interests.

Your Business Description:

Vision and Mission Statement

It is important to have a long-term vision of what you want your business to become. Some businesses use their vision and mission statement to highlight their business strategies and philosophies or to show the importance that their business places on developing good relationships with customers and employees.

A vision and mission statement is a general statement which describes your business strategies and philosophies in broad terms. Your vision and mission statement may describe your activities, the purpose of your business, your business philosophy, beliefs and values, and/or the relationship you want with employees and customers. The statement should give the reader an idea of what is important to the business and what you expect the business to become over the next 3 to 5 to 10 years.

Sample Answer:

David's Books & More will become the premier source of books, DVDs, music and video games for Rome, Georgia and communities in the surrounding area. Our goal is to provide customers with a wide variety of media choices and to promote local interests.

Your Business' Vision & Mission

Objectives

It is also important to have objectives so that you can measure how well your business is doing in the short- term. You can set objectives for desired market position (for example, we want to be the largest repair shop in town), sales (we want sales to increase by 25% over the next twelve months), profitability (we want to improve profitability by 5% in 2007), or any other issue which is important to your business. Your objectives should be simple factual statements that are measurable.

Objectives list the short to medium term (1 to 5 year) goals of the business. What do you want the business to accomplish? Your objectives should be simple, measurable and realistic. A business plan loses credibility if the objectives are not believable to the reader.

Sample Answer:

Our primary objectives over the next year are:

- 1. Complete start up activities, acquire inventory and open the business to our customers.
- 2. Secure agreements with major distributors in North West Georgia.
- 3. Obtain a term loan of $20,000 in order to acquire inventory for the store. An operating loan of $1,000 will ensure a positive monthly cash balance.
- 4. Gain a market share of 20% of all media sold in the greater Rome area by the end of the first year of operations.
- 5. Attain and maintain a position as the leading retailer of media in the greater Rome area.

Your Business Objectives

Ownership

Is your business a sole proprietorship, partnership, or corporation? What is the legal name of your business and who are the principal owners?

Corporation

A corporation, also known as a Limited Company, is a legal entity which is separate and distinct from its members (shareholders). Each shareholder has limited liability. A creditor with a claim against the assets of the company would normally have no rights against its shareholders, although in certain circumstances shareholders may be held liable.

Partnership

A partnership is a business, not incorporated, in which two or more persons combine their resources. A partnership agreement may specify the capital contributions to be made by each partner, the ratios in which partnership earnings and losses will be distributed, the management responsibilities of the partners, and the partners' rights to transfer or sell their individual interests.

Proprietorship

A proprietorship is a business owned by one person who is fully responsible for all debts and obligations related to his or her business. A creditor with a claim against a sole proprietor would normally have a right against all of his or her assets, whether business or personal. This is known as unlimited liability.

Limited Liability Corporation

The LLC is a relatively new type of hybrid business structure that is now permissible in most states. It is designed to provide the limited liability features of a corporation and the tax efficiencies and operational flexibility of a partnership. Formation is more complex and formal than that of a general partnership.

The owners are members, and the duration of the LLC is usually determined when the organization papers are filed. The time limit can be continued, if desired, by a vote of the members at the time of expiration. LLCs must not have more than two of the four characteristics that define corporations: Limited liability to the extent of assets, continuity of life, centralization of management, and free transferability of ownership interests.

Sample Answer:

David's Books & More is owned by David Mowery and his wife, Emily Mowery. Both partners are equally involved in operation and management of the company. At present the business is structured as a Limited Liability Corporation under the laws of the state of

Location & Facilities

Discuss where your business is located and what facilities you have. You may wish to include the company address and a description of your site, the size of your facility, your equipment, and your lease arrangements. In addition, explain how the location of your business adds to the success of the business. Use the graph paper provided to draw a layout of your business.

Sample Answer:

David's Books & More is located in the newly built Dragon Mall in Rome, Georgia. The store occupies 2,500 square feet, which is leased for $1,800 per month. Office equipment includes a computer with the Microsoft Office and Quick Books POS software developed for small scale retail operations such as David's Books & More. The building also includes 200 square feet of office space and 500 square feet of storage space.

Organizational Structure

Describe the management and staffing structure of your business. Discuss how many employees you expect to have over the next three years. What are the key positions within your business and what are the reporting relationships between those positions?

Sample Answer:

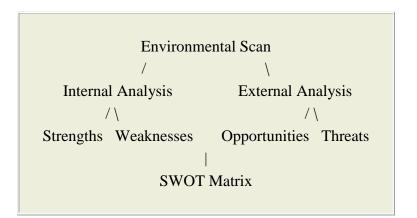

All operations and management activities will be carried out by the two partners, David and Emily Mowery. Part time employees will also be hired to cover operational hours. As the business grows, employees will be trained to take on more responsibilities and we will develop positions of authority.

SWOT Analysis

A scan of the internal and external environment is an important part of the strategic planning process. Environmental factors internal to the firm usually can be classified as strengths (S) or weaknesses (W), and those external to the firm can be classified as opportunities (O) or threats (T). Such an analysis of the strategic environment is referred to as a SWOT analysis.

The SWOT analysis provides information that is helpful in matching the firm's resources and capabilities to the competitive environment in which it operates. As such, it is instrumental in strategy formulation and selection. The following diagram shows how a SWOT analysis fits into an environmental scan:

SWOT Analysis Framework

Strengths

A firm's strengths are its resources and capabilities that can be used as a basis for developing a competitive advantage. Examples of such strengths include:

- patents
- strong brand names
- good reputation among customers
- cost advantages from proprietary know-how
- exclusive access to high grade natural resources
- favorable access to distribution networks

Weaknesses

The absence of certain strengths may be viewed as a weakness. For example, each of the following may be considered weaknesses:

- lack of patent protection
- a weak brand name
- poor reputation among customers
- high cost structure
- lack of access to the best natural resources
- lack of access to key distribution channels

In some cases, a weakness may be the flip side of a strength. Take the case in which a firm has a large amount of manufacturing capacity. While this capacity may be considered a strength that competitors do not share, it also may be a considered a weakness if the large investment in manufacturing capacity prevents the firm from reacting quickly to changes in the strategic environment.

Opportunities

The external environmental analysis may reveal certain new opportunities for profit and growth. Some examples of such opportunities include:

- an unfulfilled customer need
- arrival of new technologies
- loosening of regulations
- removal of international trade barriers

Threats

Changes in the external environmental also may present threats to the firm. Some examples of such threats include:

- shifts in consumer tastes away from the firm's products
- emergence of substitute products
- new regulations
- increased trade barriers

Market Research

When writing a business plan, it is important to have a good understanding of the industry in which you will operate. Discuss what research you would do to write your business plan. For example, would you survey current and potential customers, review research reports and statistics prepared by others, read magazine and newspaper articles, or speak to people particularly knowledgeable about the industry? Include a sample survey.

Sample Answer:

To analyze the market potential of a book and media store in the greater Rome area, we will collect information from a number of sources. We will survey a variety of media distributors to determine the sales potential of a variety of media formats, genres and titles.

In addition, we will conduct a survey of residents in the greater Rome area typically by stopping passers by on the street and asking them a few questions and using internet surveys. The survey results will be used to prepare customer profiles and gauge what type of books and magazines were in demand.

Your Market Research Plan:

Industry Analysis

How big is the industry your business will operate in? Size can be defined in many ways including sales, the number of units sold, number of producers, and/or total employment. Be sure to highlight any statistics you have on how fast the industry is growing and discuss the size of the industry in the particular area that will be served by your business. Provide a written description of the industry your business operates in; include information about the size of the industry, the history of the industry, growth rate and potential of the industry and the nature of competition within the industry. Also discuss the trends and strategic opportunities within the industry.

This portion of the business plan will require some research. You may use the Internet to find this information; however, you must document any websites that you use as sources. Documentation must be in MLA format.

Target Market

Industries can also be divided by market segments. Markets consist of potential buyers. It is useful to segment these buyers into various groups (market segments) based on their different wants, tastes, geographic locations, buying attitudes, buying practices, and/or demographics (age, gender, level of income, family size etc.). Dividing the industry into different segments can help you to better understand the potential markets for your products.

Who do the businesses within your industry sell products and/or services to? Divide the market into customer groups, highlighting the size and characteristics of those groups. For example, markets can be grouped by type of customer, geography, or other characteristics. Segment the markets on the basis that makes the most sense for your business. Identify all the possible market segments your business may attract.

Sample Answer:

The key market segments for books and media in the greater Rome area are residents with an affinity for reading and children who are currently in the school system. In particular, women between the ages of 18 and 54 are the most pivotal market segment. Demographic profiles conducted by the Publishers Clearing House Audits and Surveys division indicate that while men comprise almost half the market of book readers, 75% of all retail books purchases are made by women. Other key segments are DVD's and video games in which the typical customer is a 16 - 34 year old male.

A 1997 study commissioned by the Magazine and Bookseller Journal indicate that over 80% of all magazine buyers are between the ages of 18 to 54 and make over $24,000 per year. Overall, 56% of retail magazine buyers are female and 44% are male.

Your Business Segments:

Target Market

You have described the key market segments within your industry. Which of these customer groups or market segments will your business specifically target? You can define your target markets both by type of customer and by geographic region.

Target markets are segments or groups of potential customers, within the overall market, to whom a business wants to sell their products. For example, car manufacturers design and market cars specifically to meet the needs of different target markets such as women, families with children, families without children, etc.

Define your target market in terms of demographics, geography and lifestyles. Discuss their growth potential and their needs. Explain how your target markets may change during the term of the business.

Sample Answer:

Our major target market is the greater Rome, Georgia area and by extension, Northwest Georgia. Children and their parents are also a major target market as are retirees. Children will always need books the help in their educational development and current trends in multi-sensory learning will be addressed with our selections of DVDs and Video Games. These two product categories will also address the entertainment needs of the community.

Magazine titles will reflect the make up of the community and their interests. In addition to popular fashion, sports, news and celebrity oriented magazines; we will also stock titles focusing on outdoor activities, fishing, hunting, farming and ranching, forestry and regional activities. Although a lucrative market, David's Books & More will not stock any publications deemed as degrading toward an identifiable group.

Competitive Analysis

Every Business has competitors both direct and indirect. Direct competition is those other businesses that do the same or at least very similar things that your business does. The most direct competitors often sell the same merchandise, provide the same services, share the same customers or are located in the same geographic region. Indirect competitors are any industry or business that can possibly keep customers from spending money with your business. They don't necessarily sell the same merchandise or provide the same services, but they can provide your customers an alternative for spending money that may normally be spent in your business.

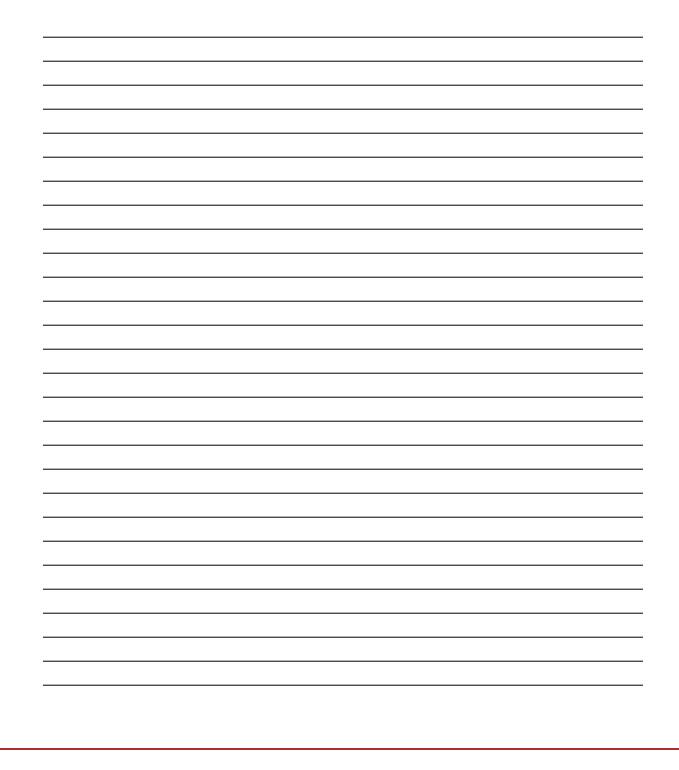

List the five most direct competitors your business faces. Discuss the strengths and weaknesses of each. List two indirect competitors and discuss why they might pose a threat to your business.

Staffing – Job Descriptions

Discuss how you will fill the key non-ownership jobs within your business. Write a brief job description for each position. Highlight the qualifications and level of experience you will require and the wage rates and benefits you will pay.

Job descriptions:

Staffing – Compensation & Benefits

Discuss the overall compensation plan you intend to offer your non-ownership employees. Provide a detailed description of both the monetary compensation plan and benefit plan. Include a policy for starting pay, receiving raises in pay, commission plan (if your sales people work on commission), and receiving tips (if tipping is customary for your business.)

Also provide a detailed policy regarding benefits. These should include everything from health benefits (possibly required by law) to employee discounts to health club memberships or any other non-monetary compensation your business would like to offer.

Remember, this is you biggest controllable expense and can make or break your business – too much compensation and your profits will disappear, too little and you will not recruit or retain quality employees.

Marketing Marketing Communications

It is very important that a business identifies a key message to communicate to the target market. This message can be in terms of consumer benefits, business features or brand identity. The message then must be communicated. Once the main message or messages are identified, a business must decide - which is the best way to get their message to the consumer; messages can be delivered through advertising, sales promotion, public relations. Once the delivery mechanics are in place, a business must be very specific about which vehicles inside each category are to be used. Choosing the wrong message or the wrong vehicle could spell disaster. The target market could ignore, reject or even never see the message.

Message Delivery

Now that your business has a message to deliver, discuss in detail how you will use the major marketing tools to get your message to your target market. Describe what vehicles/media you plan to use and why. For example, if you choose to run a television commercial during ESPN's Sports Center, discuss why you think your target market will see and hopefully respond positively to your message. Do the same for all the marketing tools: advertising, sales promotion, and public relations

Financials

Start – up Requirements

Most people do not have the amount of money it takes to start a business from scratch. They typically borrow what they need from a bank or relative and pay back the loan as the business grows. It is very important that a business understand what amount of money they will need to get started. There are many variables that most people do not think about and can sometimes doom a business before it ever opens.

Fortunately, there are many resources available to businesses to help estimate the amount of capital it will take to even open the doors of their new enterprise.

You may use the attached worksheet or go online to the following link and complete the start-up estimation calculator. Print your results.

http://www.businessknowhow.net/bkh/startup.htm

Financial Projections

Financial projections are just that, projections or assumptions. A business should be able to estimate at least the first year's revenues and profits, if the have done enough research about expenses and market sales potential.

Making projections can be difficult because so much is unknown. Any business hoping to secure some upfront capital through a loan of some sort must be able to show the lender that the business has a profitable future. Lenders do not like to take chances on risky ventures – they want to lend you money and they want you to be successful.

Using Excel, make charts showing the first year sales, profits and cash flow projections. Make sure these assumptions are optimistic, yet realistic. Be able to identify growth, peak seasons (back-to- school, holidays, etc.) and slowdowns. Be able to justify your numbers through reasonable explanations. Use the proper chart that communicates what you are trying to say the best.

Print your spreadsheets/charts and save them to your folders, as you will be embedding them into the final draft of your business plan.

Executive Summary

The Executive Summary can be the most important section of your business plan because people will read it first and it may be the only section they read. The Executive Summary convinces the reader that the business concept is sound and has a reasonable opportunity for success.

Although it will be printed out first, the Executive Summary should be done last after you have completed the other sections. The keys to a good Executive Summary are that:

- It should be short (2 pages at most).
- It should highlight what is important in your plan.
- It should get the reader excited about your business.
